D. Glat, 1419 Jackson street, when their two small daughters, Eleanor and Josephine entertained.

A lawn party was planned and everything was in readiness, while the spacious lawns were gaily strung with many colored electric lights preparatory to a jolly evening in the open, but owing to the rain during the afternoon, the youngsters were forced to content themselves with indoor pleasures, and a very delightful evening was spent in contests and games in the prettily decorated guest rooms, and before the guests departed to their respective homes a delicious refreshment course of ices and cake was served.

The work this season expected to be even more successful and create even greater interest than that of last year.

LITTLE THEATRE MOVEMENT GROWING IN POPULARITY.

The little theatre is gradually pushing itself to the foreground of the great stage of dramatic art. It has been said that this movement is one of the newest, freest, most potent and dramatic forces in the art of the American stage today. Groups of little theatre players have sprung up within the past few years in practically all of our large cities, and in many smaller ones which prove the growing popularity of the movement. In southern California alone there are over fifteen active community theatre groups. These players have organized with the purpose of giving to the people by utilizing local talent, a cleaner, higher and more reasonably priced line of entertainment than could be offered by road professionals.

The little theatre company of Amarillo, or the Amarillo Dramatic Society ranks high among those of larger cities in both talent and organization, and under the professional direction of Stanley W. Nickerson, is growing rapidly in strength and interest and is steadily working toward unquestioned success. The company is now rehearsing a group of plays to be presented Monday, September 18, at the Baptist Church Recreational Grounds, under the auspices of the Senior Fidelas Class of that church, who are raising a fund to assist deserving boys and girls, who are ambitious to continue their education in higher institutions of learning and who are financially unable to do so. The plays to be given are, "The Pot Boiler" and "The Play House."

"The Pot Boiler," a play within a play, is brimming over with fun and wholesome humor, and strives to give from numerous viewpoints the trials of both actors and play directors, all of the "horrible" details of the rehearsal of a play.

"The Play House" is a beautiful story of two lovers who were parted on his enlistment for service in the World War, and following months of anxious waiting after his departure to France, a report is received to the effect that he has been killed in action. From the midst of the debris of her shattered dreams, the brave little heroine builds the little home of their dreams, and in her fancy meets him there each evening. It finally turns out however, as all good stories do, that the hero is very much alive, and in a thrilling climax returns to live in reality with his sweetheart in their "little house of dreams." Tickets for the plays were placed on sale last Monday and may be purchased for fifteen and thirty-five cents from any of the members of the Fidelas Class.

They are the sort that may be worn day in and day out, resisting desk and seat wear, and do not wrinkle readily. The modes are exceedingly simple but what they lack in adornment, they make up in smartness and economy.

They can be had in many pretty combinations in attractive colors, just what the school girl likes, the materials are Velvet, Jersey and many Woolen Fabrics. Sizes from 6 to 16 years. Priced very modest.
